

Jessica Goldman Srebnick
CEO of Goldman Properties

Jessica Goldman Srebnick, CEO of Goldman Properties, was with the company founded by her late father, Tony Goldman, for 15 years before taking the reins at his behest in 2012. Founded in 1968, the award winning company recognizes the value in depressed urban areas, reimagining, reconstructing and transforming declining districts into thriving global destinations. Today, Goldman Properties is considered the go-to creative real estate company for the revitalization of at-risk neighborhoods. Goldman Srebnick oversees the company's portfolio of assets in New York, Philadelphia, Miami Beach and Miami's emerging Wynwood Arts District. The diverse company includes a mix of hotels, restaurants, office buildings, commercial, retail and residential properties and large scale public art projects including the Wynwood Walls, the highly acclaimed outdoor street art museum.

In July 2015, Goldman Srebnick founded Goldman Global Arts (GGA). Established to conceptualize and produce impactful, thought provoking creative projects for a variety of organizations, with the goal of changing the paradigm of how people interact with art. GGA's first project is an integration of world class art into Miami's Sunlife Stadium, home to the Miami Dolphins.

Goldman Srebnick is an active member of the prestigious Young Presidents Organization (YPO). She co-chaired the YPO/WPO Global Leadership Conference in Miami in 2009 and since 2010 continues to participate in the YPO/Harvard Business School Presidents Leadership Program. She is a member of the board of Town Square Neighborhood Development Corporation (TSNDC) a non-profit and independent entity that oversees the development of Miami's emerging Arsht Center District, and a member of the Memorial Sloan Kettering Cycle for Survival National Battle Leadership Council. She co-produced the docu-series Here Comes the Neighborhood, which explores the transformation of the street art genre and executive produced with her father, One Day on Earth – the game changing documentary with premiered in April 2012 at the United Nations. The film tells the compelling stories of everyday life in every country on earth, all on the same day.

Goldman Srebnick has received numerous accolades; including being named one of South Florida Business Journal's Top 100 Power Leaders and Florida International University Center for Leadership named her one of 50 Prominent Women in Florida. She is the recipient of the prestigious Key to the City of Miami, which she was awarded for her work with YPO, was a key note speaker at the Urban Land Institute

Fall 2015 conference and is a finalist for the Urban Land Institute's Global Award of Excellence for her Wynwood Walls project.

In addition to the accolades, she has received worldwide press, gracing the cover of Executive South Florida Magazine, has been interviewed for the BBC, NBC and a Meet the Press Documentary with Chuck Todd. She has been featured and/or quoted in the New York Times, Vanity Fair, Miami Herald, Huffington Post, Ocean Drive Magazine and the Real Deal to name a few. Furthermore, her efforts in Wynwood have led to Vogue and Forbes magazines listing the area as one of the coolest neighborhoods in the world as well as a recent Huffington Post article calling Miami the "New Center of the Arts in America".

Jessica lives in Miami Beach with her husband Scott Srebnick and their three sons.
